

Iowa Family Literacy Professional Development Workshop

Sponsored by:
Iowa Department of Education
Division of Community Colleges & Workforce Preparation

Friday, March 31, 2006
8:00 a.m. – 1:30 p.m.
Delivered via ICN

Sylvia Cobos Lieshoff, Ph.D., is a training specialist in the field of adult education at the National Center for Family Literacy (NCFL). Her work, experience, and writing span the fields of family and consumer sciences, gender equity, adult education, and family literacy. At NCFL, Sylvia conducts trainings and provides technical assistance to family literacy programs across the U.S. She also works on the Verizon Literacy Campus Project, where she serves as the discussion forum moderator and is an online course author. Sylvia holds degrees from the University of Arizona and Texas A&M University. She resides in Louisville with her husband and has two grown sons.

Linda Berg is an Educational Consultant for Career Development and Career Resources at the Iowa Department of Education. She has been an instructor, teacher and administrator in secondary schools and community colleges in Iowa and Minnesota for the last 20 years. Her role at the Department of Education is to provide technical assistance on career education, and the components of career information and development (awareness, exploration, preparation and reflection) to prepare all students (K-16) for the future workforce.

This informative workshop is designed for the Iowa Community College Family Literacy Grant Project Administrators to assist in the completion of the next Iowa Community College Family Literacy continuation proposal application. Participants will receive useful information for how to integrate technology enhancements and career development guidelines into their family literacy program and the continuation proposal application.
